

Levar Fisher

Corporate Introduction

Levar Fisher is an awarded college athlete who became a successful pro, captaining not one – but two NFL teams, and later taking that leadership role to the stage as a sought- after motivational speaker and author. His amazing story has inspired audiences’ nationwide—receiving praise from notables like author and motivational speaker, Les Brown and former Florida State Football Coach, Chuck Amato.

Recruited by the North Carolina State University Wolfpack in 1998, Levar quickly made a name for himself as:

- Best Defensive Player (2000, 2001)
- 1st Team All-ACC (1999, 2000, 2001)
- Consensus All- American (2000, 2001)
- Butkus Semi Finalist for Best Linebacker in the Country (2000, 2001)
- Nagurski Finalist for Best Defensive Player in the Country (2000)
- Led the Nation in Tackles
- Lastly achieving his greatest honor as an Academic All – American.

In 2002, the star Wolfpacker was drafted by the Arizona Cardinals - 17th Pick in the 2nd Round. In 2006, Levar joined the New Orleans Saints, where his NFL career ended with a devastating knee injury.

For the last several years, Levar has been bringing his “A” game to leadership conferences, seminars and locker rooms across the country. He’s not on the field anymore, but he’s passionately using everything he has helping his new team win—simply everyone within an earshot.

A native North Carolinian, Levar and his family now reside in the Chicagoland area, where they manage his speaking and event firm, self-publishing company, as well as a youth-supporting foundation called Fisher of Men, Inc.

With great anticipation, we are happy to introduce to you Levar Fisher.
